IELTS Up Words!

Lesson 13: Linguistics

Linguistics

Hey there! You are listening to the thirteenth lesson of IELTS Up Words! I am Yasi, your IELTS mentor from Lingemy.com. In the previous lesson, we discussed the challenges in the way of learning a new language. I am saying “in the way” and not “on the way” because if something is in the way of a project, it is blocking its way. So yeah, just like what I said in the previous lesson, you need to spend a lot of time studying English if you want to master it.

But how can you tell that you have mastered English? Well, can you strike up a conversation in English effortlessly? Can you crack jokes in English or make a speech? Do you know how to use words correctly so that you won’t offend someone? Can you produce compelling reasons? Can you gossip in English? If you answered yes to all these questions, then, congratulations! You have mastered the English language!

Now, speaking of gossiping, let’s make it today’s topic of discussion, shall we? In this lesson, I am going to talk about a few things I have learned about gossiping. So listen to me or read the pamphlet and then tell me what you think. Okay?

I have been reading this book called Sapiens: A Brief History of Humankind by Yuval Noah Harari, which is a fascinating book, and I highly recommend it. In this book, there is a part discussing the importance of gossiping and how it has enabled humans to live in a society! According to a theory mentioned in this book, gossip has contributed so much to the development of our language and in fact, our language evolved as a way of gossiping! Can you believe it? So apparently, gossiping about your co-worker who is always economical with the truth or about your friend who tries to converse with a phony British accent is not evil! Some scientists argue that gossip provides the social glue permitting humans to live in large groups.

What do you think? Do you agree?

Speaking Tip

Paraphrasing: The Passive Voice

- If the voice is passive ,try making the paraphrase active.
- Part three of IELTS speaking is usually the best place to paraphrase like this.
- It is best to change to the passive voice when the action is important and you want to put more emphasis on it.

Example:

Question :Why do you think we need an international language?

Answer: I believe an international language is needed to bring people closer together and set aside differences.
