IELTS Up Words!

Lesson 17: History

History

Hello and welcome to the seventeenth lesson of IELTS Up Words! I hope you are doing well today. It is a beautiful day on this planet, and we are all alive! What is better than that, huh? Maybe scoring very high in IELTS? Haha! But getting a high score in IELTS does make your day better, so why not aim for the stars and try your hardest to score very high? And it is not even that hard. I mean, compared to our great-grandfathers, we have a far easier time learning a new skill because of the advances in technology. It is not like the Middle Ages anymore! The Internet has marked the beginning of an era of information which has made it much easier to learn and master a new skill. Am I right?

Now without further ado, let's get to today's question, which is about history!

Have you ever been to historical museums?

Yes, of course! I have made a habit of checking historical museums whenever I travel to a new city. Unlike some people who don't like looking at ancient artifacts, I find it really intriguing to see the remains of something that predates all modern structures. It just fills me with awe and wonder.

Does my answer to the above question ring true for you? Do you enjoy learning about history? About a bygone era? About an era preceding ours? Or about recent excavations by archaeologists? I believe those who know the history are better equipped at predicting the future because, as they say, "history always repeats itself."
