IELTS Up Words!

Lesson 31: Climate Change

Hey there. Welcome to lesson thirty-one of IELTS Up Words! In this lesson, we are going to talk about a controversial topic: climate change.

Remember the meaning of controversial? We had it in one of the previous lessons. It is a topic that causes debate or disagreement. Why? Because some people, including Donald Trump, believe that climate change is a hoax. It means that he thinks it is fake. What do you think?

Now listen to two related questions and answer them yourself before hearing my response. You could also practice a bit more by agreeing or disagreeing with what I say.

Do you believe that climate change is a serious problem?

Of course I do. The scientific consensus is that climate change is real. Just take a look at the changing weather patterns in many parts of the world. Parts of Europe that used to be cooler, now experience intense, searing heat, and temperatures soar above the average every summer. These weather changes are a consequence of irresponsible human activities that have been going on for centuries.

How can we tackle climate change?

First and foremost, we must identify the contributing factors and then, find a way to improve the conditions. For example, air travel is a major contributor because airplanes emit an excessive amount of greenhouse gases into the atmosphere. This problem can be dealt with through a practice called carbon offsetting, which is a way to reduce carbon emission and thus, deal with climate change more efficiently.

Speaking Tip

The Power of “These” and “This”

By the way, for your speaking, make sure to link your ideas together logically and use natural phrases to help your listener follow your ideas and stories. The linking words that are used for the speaking test in IELTS don’t need to be as formal or complex as the ones in the writing test. For example, you can use “this” or “these” to link your sentences naturally. Take a look at the above answers and find two examples of this usage.

More on “This” and “These”

• They can be used as determiners:

Example: “Mind mapping is a great technique. This technique can help you organize your thoughts.”

Using them as cohesive devices can make your sentences flow more naturally into one another.
