IELTS Up Words!

Lesson 34: Employment

Welcome to lesson thirty-four of IELTS Up Words. You are back for another lesson, right?

I don't mean to sound cocky, but if you have gotten this far, it probably means that you are enjoying this course. Am I right? Haha.

To be honest, preparing this course took me a long time. It took approximately two years to design the overall structure of the course, and then I had to work weeks on end to finalize it. I didn't do it all on my own, though. My team helped perfect it by editing the texts and audios and by designing the PDF files. They had to work long hours to meet the deadlines, and I am grateful to them for the effort that they put in.

As you have probably guessed, my team and I work online, which has its perks. For instance, we don't have to commute to work, and the working hours are quite flexible. And since our work is not location dependent, we get to work from anywhere, be it on a trip or at home. Moreover, because we work in the education sector and create educational content, we experience a rewarding sense of job satisfaction.

But don't get me wrong, this job comes with its difficulties as well. For example, we need to work extra hard to gain credibility as a leading educational startup. And to do so, we are constantly creating free content for our blog, Telegram channel, and Instagram account, which is quite a lot.

Now, it is your turn. Tell me about your job. What line of work are you in? Are you an employee or an employer? Are you still in the workforce or have you retired and now you collect your pension? Describe what you do for a living the best way you can. Okay? This time, I want you to write down the points you want to mention and then speak. Doing this helps you organize your thoughts better and therefore, make it easier for your listener to follow what you say.

Speaking Tip

Avoid Echoing

Echoing, in general, means to repeat someone's words or opinions, typically to express agreement. In this context, echoing refers to when you repeat the exact words the examiner says. For example:

Question: What is the biggest disadvantage of being a stay-at-home mom?

Answer: I think the biggest disadvantage of being a stay-at-home mom is that you might lose your financial independence.

Ways to avoid echoing:

Paraphrasing

Example: I think the most obvious downside of being a stay-at-home mom is that you might lose your financial independence.

Using pronouns

Example: I think it is that you might lose your financial independence.

It is usually okay to repeat one or two words from the question in some cases, especially in the first part of the speaking test.
