IELTS Up Words!

Lesson 35: Invaluable Careers

Hello, and welcome to lesson thirty-five. In this lesson, I am going to answer a typical part-two IELTS speaking question. A typical part-two question consists of a short description of a topic, with some ideas for what to include. You will need to talk for about two minutes, which might seem too long at first, but with practice, it will become easy as ABC.

Let's dive in and see what this question is about.

Describe a job that is considered important in your country. You should say:

- what it is and what qualification or training is required
- what kind of people choose it and why
- how it helps the country
- explain why this job is important in your country

I am going to talk about nursing, which I think is not only important in my country but in the whole world. To qualify as a registered nurse, I guess you should first go to medical school and then do an internship in a medical setting.

In terms of why people choose to become a nurse, I believe it is mostly because of how rewarding this job can be. Nurses make a real difference and save lives daily by monitoring patients and making sure they receive all the care they need. But not everyone can make a good nurse because you need to have built great stamina to survive long twelve-hour shifts.

Nurses help improve the health of the country in many different ways. For example, during emergencies, the majority of the medical staff work overtime shifts to take care of all the sick people, like during the coronavirus pandemic. Some of them even go above and beyond by working too hard and putting their own lives at risk. Had it not been for the sacrifices that our nurses made during past epidemics, many would have lost their lives.

And as to why this job is important in Iran, well, I think it has to do with the fact that nurses save lives, which is arguably the most important thing for every country. They are always on the front line of preparing for emergencies and disasters and, therefore, should be really valued by each and every one of us.

Speaking Tip

Addition List

Use the following cohesive devices to add a new point to a previous idea:

- Moreover

We usually use it at the beginning of a sentence. Use it after complex or compound sentences.

Example: Moreover, statistics show that competition for places is growing.

- The former

When you want to refer to two ideas, the first one would be called “the former” and the second one “the latter.”

Example: The Simpsons and Game of Thrones are both great shows, but I prefer the former.

- Besides

It is not as formal as “moreover,” but still suitable for IELTS.

Example: I had no time to warn you. Besides, I wasn’t sure.

- Additionally

Use it like “in addition to.”

- Furthermore

Use it like “moreover.”

- What is more

Another cohesive device like “besides.”

Instead of learning an endless list of cohesive devices, master using a few for every purpose.
