Lesson 55: Means of Transport

Hello again! You are back! Is this your first time listening to this lesson, or are you back to review it? If you are here for revision, I bet things are much easier for you this time around. You can and should go back to every lesson and review them often. Did you know that the three pillars of vocabulary development are routine, repetition, and review? They are the three Rs of language-learning success. Keep that in mind.

In this lesson, let's learn a bit about transportation and tourism, shall we?

So, what are your preferred means of transportation?

As a tourist, and with regards to the means of transport, you have an array of options to choose from. You can either go on a road trip, take the train, get on a plane, or go on a cruise. The mode of transportation that you pick can also depend on where you are. If you are visiting Bhutan and want to access its precarious monasteries, you might need to get in a taxi, but if you are visiting a charming village in Japan, you could probably ride the bullet train to get there. The bullet train in Japan is world-famous for its speed.

Some people avoid flights because of their fear of flying. I used to be that way too, and my phobia exacerbated after that tragic plane incident in Iran. I remember I had to fly to Baku after that incident, and when I walked inside the airport, I was shocked to see that the airport was virtually empty. And as you would expect, I was trembling in fear the whole time during that flight, and even after that plane landed, I immediately started worrying about the return journey, which was going to be through the air again.

That aside, traveling by air is one of the safest ways of traveling with few incidents reported each year worldwide. Plus, air travel is traffic-free and more comfortable these days. I think it is the best option, especially for those who put a money value on their time.

Speaking Tip

Stress

• Changing the stress in a word can make it sound unintelligible to the listener or alter its meaning.

• You can look up where the stress is placed in a word in the dictionary.

Some stress rules:

• The stress is usually on the syllable before the last in words ending in -tion or -sion.

Examples: relation; extension; tension; satisfaction; computerization; promotion

• The stress on two-syllable words that are used both as a verb and a noun, is usually on the first syllable when used as a noun and on the second syllable when used as a verb.

Examples: perfect; present; suspect; contrast; insult; conflict; object; project
