IELTS Up Words!

Lesson 62: Home

Welcome to lesson sixty-two. In this lesson, we are going to talk about home and design. I think everyone loves design! No, I mean, I don't know, some people might not be particularly fond of it. Everyone's preferences are different after all!

You can tell I usually avoid generalization. Haha. This is true because making sweeping statements about things is against my personal ethics since I think it is an indicator of a lack of empathy for other beings. Wow! I digressed! I mean, I stopped talking about the main topic, which was design. So, let's get back to that one.

Design is a broad topic and can encompass many ideas, such as home design, interior design, graphic design, or fashion design. Let's narrow it down to home design, shall we? In another lesson, we will talk about fashion design. Home is a popular IELTS topic, especially for part one. You have already learned a lot of words for this topic in lessons twenty-two and twenty-three, but it is always a good idea to learn more, right?

People usually live in houses or apartments, and they are both a type of accommodation. Some accommodations are short let, while others are long-term rentals. Because there is a shortage of affordable housing, some people prefer to buy a dilapidated building and then do it up, or add an extension. If you ask me, I think renovating an old house can be such a rewarding thing to do. You get to refurbish an old house and turn it into your dream home! What is better than that?

But of course, you will need to be able to turn screws, drill holes, work with a screwdriver or a hammer, and operate different machines if you want to save money when renovating a place.

Now that you have learned a few things about homes, let's answer a part-three question together.

How do you think the design of homes will change in the future?

Although I think the materials used to build houses will remain the same, their design will probably go through a transformation. First, all sorts of accommodation will start to shrink, as there won't be enough space to fit in the growing population of Earth. Second, thanks to the Internet of Things, homes will become smarter, and we will be able to control domestic appliances by the Internet and program them. For example, our refrigerator can be programmed to order food on its own when it runs out of certain fresh produce. And finally, they will be designed to be more sustainable, which means that we will get to live in a house or apartment that has the least possible negative impact on the environment and is energy efficient.

Speaking Tip

Stress in Compound Words

The stress is on the first word in a compound noun, such as in bedroom, schoolboy, or home décor.

The stress is on the second word in a compound verb, such as in outdo and overreact.

The stress is usually on the second part in a compound adjective, such as in overweight, bad-tempered, and undernourished.
