IELTS Up Words!

Lesson 72: Numbers

Hello. You are listening to lesson seventy-two of IELTS Up Words! You have covered a good number of lessons so far. How does it make you feel? Proud? Humbled? Overwhelmed? Inspired?

It is of great importance for you to realize that this is indeed just the beginning. Learning new vocabulary is a journey, not a destination. When you first start learning English, it is fast and easy to get to a conversational level, but the truth is, you need to put in a substantial amount of effort to drastically improve your level after you've reached an intermediate or upper-intermediate level. And, like it or not, it is a widespread myth that you can simply master English within a short amount of time.

You may complain that you do not have enough time and that you are already snowed under a pile of work, but if you think about it it in the cold light of day, you will realize that it is all worth it. Just imagine how much more fluently you will get to speak and how many more words you will know by heart within a few months or years.

As you may have noticed, the topic of this lesson is numbers, which has proved to be a popular IELTS speaking topic in part one in 2020. Some questions are frequently asked during the year, so if you put two and two together, you will understand that it is a wise move to practice these topics before you sit your test. Am I right?

Now, let's get down to business and answer a few part-one questions together. Ready?

What is your favorite number?

My favorite number is eleven because I consider it a magical number, and every time

I check my phone and it is eleven past eleven, I close my eyes to make a wish. I think it is also the symbol of unity because there are two ones standing next to one another, which is a beautiful sign to me.

Are you good at memorizing phone numbers?

Definitely not! I might have been good at it when I was a high schooler, but these days, I can't even memorize vanity phone numbers,but still, I have been doing some math problems every day to see if I can fix this.

Would you like to have a job dealing with numbers?

I don't think so! Working with numbers is not high on my list of things to do because I often struggle with math. I make mathematical mistakes even when I am using a calculator, so you can tell I would not want to be around numbers.

Speaking Tip

Pacing in IELTS Speaking

Don't speak too fast either during the test or in your everyday conversations.

There is a higher chance that you will stumble over a word when you speak too fast.

Speaking fast does not grant you a higher score in the IELTS test.

You may run out of ideas if you don't maintain a reasonable speaking pace during your test.
