IELTS Up Words!

Lesson 75: Personal Finance

Hello! You are listening to one of the final lessons of IELTS Up Words! I think I am going to miss talking to you real soon! But it is OK, as I am going to continue making more content for you! So, it is all good! In this lesson, I will answer a part-two question, which is related to personal finance. Well, it is not related to this subject in itself. It is actually about an important day in my life, and I have decided to talk about the first time I got paid.

By the way, personal finance is defined as the management of money and financial decisions for a person or family, including budgeting, investments, and retirement planning.

Describe an important day in your life. You should say:

- when it was
- whether you were alone or with others
- what happened exactly
- and why this day was important to you, and if it changed your life

I am going to talk about the day I received my first paycheck, which was well over a decade ago.

As a graduation gift, my uncle had given me a large sum of money to spend on a teaching course. He advised me to follow in my aunt's footsteps by taking the teacher training course at Kish Institute, which was a prominent language school back then. And so I did. I took the course and was immediately hired afterward. The first few weeks were extremely tough, especially since I was an introvert and did not have much people skills. But thanks to my supervisor, who had a friendly demeanor, and my amiable fellow teachers, I managed to survive the initial stress. Anyway, fast forward to the last day of the month, I received my first paycheck in an envelope at the institute.

It must have been another ordinary payday for most of my colleagues, but to me, that day was extremely meaningful and symbolic. It just felt surreal. Before then, I never had much money. The pocket money that my dad used to give me was barely enough to help make ends meet as a college student, but here I was, feeling financially independent with enough money to spend on coffee, books, and even to save up for a car. It was a proud and extremely ecstatic moment when I realized that I no longer needed to be dependent on anyone, at least financially, and I could live off my own expenses. Those days also marked the beginning of my teaching endeavors and changed my life for the better, since I went on to become a better teacher, earn more, and build my own business to help others feel the same way.

Speaking Tip

Speaking Part Two: Events and Situations

- Other frequently asked questions are about events or situations in your life.
- Events like weddings, festivals, and holidays
- Situations where you received some advice, lied, got angry, etc.
- When talking about situations or events, you can include a little background information about what you want to say.
- Be careful about the verb tenses that you use for situations or events; they should be in the past tense.
- Talk about past hobbies using “used to” or “would.”
- Use the past perfect tense to talk about a past event that happened before another one in the past.
