IELTS Up Words!

Lesson 77: War and Peace

No, no, no! We are not going to talk about Leo Tolstoy's novel here. Haha! This is lesson seventy-seven of IELTS Up Words, and I am here to talk to you about the subject of war and peace.

Most wars start as small incidents and then develop into all-out wars. And when a war breaks out, many people get drafted to join the army. These soldiers might be taken prisoner or get killed, and those who survive may never forget the horrors of war. Wars usually end when a ceasefire is called or when a peace agreement is negotiated and accepted by both sides.

I don't think the world can handle another war since in many nations have developed nuclear weapons and have very strong militaries. Therefore, if another war is declared, the results will be catastrophic, so we need to do whatever we can to avert war in the future and keep the peace. But unfortunately, this is not easy to do because there are many warmongering countries out there that benefit from wars, army mobilization and deployment.

But it is not just countries that go to war. Sometimes, a war starts inside a country, which is called a civil war. Civil wars are defined as internal to a country, where one or more organized groups fight against the government and many civilians die as a result. Civil wars are fueled by civil conflicts, especially when a large proportion of society does not agree with the government. In some nations like the US, where many people are armed to the teeth and police brutality is common, things can get violent or out of hand quickly.

I believe it is on the government to provide the citizens with a chance to start peaceful protest rallies and ensure freedom of speech to avoid civil unrest and prevent violent riots from breaking out. Now, speaking of riots, let's answer a related part-three question. Shall we?

What are the advantages and disadvantages of riots?

I can't honestly think of any advantages when it comes to riots. Because, first, they are destructive and can cause a lot of damage to public and private properties. Take, for example, all the looting and smashed store windows during a riot. They are simply inevitable when things end in violence. Second, they might lead to a feeling of unsafety among the citizens. For example, you would no longer feel safe enough to go for a walk outside. And finally, rioting could work to people's disadvantage because the state might decide to take measures such as declaring a country-wide military enforced curfew to keep the people from participating in any form of demonstrations.

Speaking Tip

What If You Don't Know?

Take a look at the following cue card:

A time when you heard about riots in another country:

- What did you hear?
- When did you hear it?
- How did it make you feel to hear about it?
- What suggestions can you make for reducing the number of riots?

If you come across a question like this and can't think of anything, it is okay to talk about a related topic. What I mean is that if you don't know of any riots anywhere, simply start by explaining the fact that you haven't heard about any riots, and then go on to talk about a similar issue, such as a peaceful protest in your country. In most cases, you won't lose any score if you do so. The important thing is that you take control of the question and express your views clearly.

A good start:

"Well, I don't normally follow the news, to be honest, and can't think of any riots, so I am going to tell you about an interesting demonstration that took place last year in my country."
