IELTS Up Words!

Lesson 79: Celebrities

Hello! You are listening to lesson seventy-nine of IELTS Up Words! Holy cricket! Only three more lessons to go? "Holy cricket" is an interjection used to show surprise and was used by Hermione Granger in Harry Potter. Remember?

Hermione Granger was a character from Harry Potter novels and film series, portrayed by Emma Watson, who is a famous celebrity. I am a big fan of her because I think she is gracious, sophisticated, and intelligent.

Some celebrities indulge in a lavish lifestyle, which means that they live luxuriously; some are involved in humanitarian missions, and some get checked into rehab to quit their drug addiction. Unfortunately, not all celebrities are good human beings, as many of them would do anything for money. They might even endorse harmful products or advocate causes that might be harmful to the environment.

Due to the rise of social media, it is increasingly easy to become famous overnight. We see a lot of instant celebrities on Instagram who rise to fame by showing a lot of skin in their glamorous, airbrushed photos. These celebrities enjoy being in the public eye and some of them would do anything to grab as much attention as possible.

These people don't even care about making a lapse in judgment or doing something embarrassing. In fact, they go as far as leaking their own nude photos or doing something stupid to make front-page headlines. They apparently believe in the notion that "there is no such thing as bad publicity," meaning that it doesn't matter if you are famous or infamous, as long as you get to be the center of attention.

Okay. Are you ready for another part-three question? Let's dive in!

When a person becomes very wealthy and famous, do they lose their right to privacy?

I guess everyone, including celebrities, has a basic right to privacy. But unfortunately, the more famous you get, the harder it becomes to stay out of the public eye. Since, as a celebrity, you are in the spotlight, the media outlets compete with one another for more intimate details about you, and so they pry into your life. Therefore, most famous people suffer from press intrusion and are followed by paparazzi everywhere they go. On the other hand, some celebrities may deliberately give away personal details to generate publicity. I have heard about some reality TV stars who have leaked their own photos in compromising positions to keep people talking about them. But still, celebrities should have privacy if they want to.
